With a vocal style that evokes such jazz greats as Peggy Lee, Sarah Vaughan, Nancy Wilson, and Anita O’Day, jazz newcomer Erin O’Luanaigh brings to the music scene a voice with a depth and maturity that belies her 21 years. The vocalist from Cheshire, Connecticut, is captivating listeners with the October release of her debut album, Honeysuckle Rose. Erin’s music has been featured on the internationally syndicated Dick Robinson’s American Standards by the Sea and The Don Kennedy Show. Mr. Kennedy praised Honeysuckle Rose, claiming, Erin’s voice made the hair stand up on the back of my neck. She sings with great expression and a depth that you just can’t hear — you’ve got to feel.
