"As a lifelong lover of books and libraries, I was delighted to be a part of One Big Summer Night," said Arianna Huffington, president and editor-in-chief of the Huffington Post Media Group. "At a time when libraries across the country are increasingly under attack, it was so heartening to be in the company of those who are preserving the Library's legacy of starting conversations, exchanging ideas, and providing essential services to the Hartford community."

"CL&P is honored to be associated with the Hartford Public Library as it continues to redefine the urban public library," said CL&P Senior Vice President of Emergency Preparedness Bill Quinlan. "More and more people are taking advantage of their many programs. That is a clear sign the library is viewed as an essential educational resource for Hartford's many neighborhoods."

Highlights of the event included pre-event cocktail receptions sponsored by The Hartford and First Niagara, a live auction sponsored by the Travelers, a silent auction, a sumptuous meal, and performances by Ed Fast and Christine Dixon-Smith (Sistah Nandi) and the Sankofa Ensemble.

Matt Poland, the Library's chief executive officer, launched a fundraising campaign for Itty Bitty City, an interactive learning and discovery play space for Hartford youth and their parents. $27,000 was raised in support of this project that focuses on early literacy for children ages birth to five.

Of the event, Lt. Governor Wyman said, “This Library is not just a building filled with books. It is a living, breathing and growing part of the lifeblood of this community that is enriching the lives and the futures of so many – young, old and in-between. I was proud to be Honorary Chair of this wonderful gala, and even prouder that our Capital city is home to such an exceptional place of learning – and of doing. And Hartford Public Library, a place like no other, is among the best in the nation.”
